Overview

As a quickly growing digital landscape explodes the global economy, a number of forces are coming together to reshape how businesses compete and create long term sustainable prosperity with purpose. This new world order is turning upside down previously held, well established norms in the workplace and redefining the very definition of the work that organisations need to perform to survive. It also means we need to reconsider 'jobs' and traditional work constructs in accountancy. ACCA's Future of Careers report considers the trends impacting the careers that professional accountants will have in the future, as well as identifying broad areas of career opportunities as we look forward.

Webinar roundup: professional skills

CAREERS

Connected planning

Register now

In this webinar you will learn how the very latest technology is enabling large fast-growing organisations to connect people, plans and processes, across all business functions, to make informed decisions and drive faster, more effective planning processes.

Balancing the balance sheet

Register now

This session will show you a simple trick to get your balance sheet to balance first time, every time, using simple modelling techniques, a little accounting knowledge, gratuitous use of error checks and a very basic control account.

Leading through change

Register now

According to a study by the Saïd Business School at Oxford, 65-70% of change projects globally fail, leading to losses of billions of dollars. And six of the nine reasons for failure were related to people. In this webinar, we shall explore the overlap between leadership, communication and successful change.

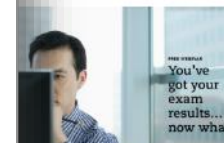

BRI: UK business environment and practical tax considerations for international investors

Register now

This webinar looks at the practical considerations for setting up in the UK.
